www.sustainableproduction.org
www.chemicalspolicy.org

*Note: This inventory was compiled using searches of legislative and legal databases as well as interviews with key stakeholders. The types of policies and programs examined relate to those relevant to the rapid identification, characterization, and prevention of chemicals of emerging concern in five general categories: industrial chemicals, consumer products, pesticides, nanomaterials, and pharmaceuticals. The policies and programs contained in the database are ones that have been enacted at the municipal, state, federal, or regional/international levels. Given the wide range of policies and programs, we expect that the database contains gaps that can be filled through further research and outreach with relevant authorities.

NAME OF POLICY/PROGRAM	Great Lakes Binational Toxics Strategy: Canada--United States Strategy for the Virtual Elimination of Persistent Toxic Substances in the Great Lakes
Level of Policy/Program	International
Date Enacted	1997
Description	Provides a collaborative process by which Canadian and U.S. governmental agencies and departments, Great Lakes states, the Province of Ontario, and Aboriginal groups will work toward the goal of virtual elimination of POPs resulting from human activity in the Great Lakes Basin, in keeping with Article II(a) of the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement. Recognizes the need for all sectors – public and private – to work together to reach the goal of virtual elimination. Employs a four-step process to advance the goal of virtual elimination, which includes: (1) information gathering regarding the sources of toxic chemicals, (2) analyzing current regulations, initiatives, and programs aimed at managing or controlling substances, (3) identifying cost-effective options to achieve reductions, and (4) implementing actions to work toward the goal of virtual elimination.
